

SPACE READING CHART

REWARD

REWARD

REWARD

REWARD

REWARD

YOUR NAME:

HOW TO USE THE SPACE READING CHART

A QUICK GUIDE FOR PARENTS

This chart turns reading into a space mission. Each box your child fills is one step closer to a reward star, and to building a reading habit that lasts.

1

Get ready for launch

Print the chart and let your child write their name in the name box. Hang it where they will see it every day, like the fridge or their bedroom door.

2

Decide what fills one box

Choose a goal that fits your child's age: one book, one chapter, or 15–20 minutes of reading. Agree on it together and keep the rule the same.

3

Fill a box after each reading

When the goal is done, your child colors a box, adds a sticker, or draws a star or planet. Doing it themselves makes the progress feel real.

4

Reach a reward star

Every row has six boxes. When a row is complete, your child reaches the REWARD star at the end and earns the prize you agreed on beforehand.

5

Complete the mission

Thirty boxes and five rewards complete the chart. Celebrate the finished mission and, if they enjoyed it, print a new chart for the next adventure.

REWARD IDEAS

- + Choosing a new book
- + A trip to the library or bookstore
- + An extra bedtime story
- + A stargazing night
- + Picking the family movie
- + A small toy or space stickers

TIPS FOR SUCCESS

- + Read together when you can.
- + Let them choose: comics and magazines count too.
- + Praise effort, not speed.
- + Never erase boxes as a punishment.
- + Ask about the story: "What was your favorite part?"

HAPPY READING, ASTRONAUT FAMILY!

